Marx on Athena like a City Imagined full of Capital (1847)
By Karl Marx

I. All that is solid melts into Air, I meant real Air to breathe

Imagine financial plunder and loot, which then drives away the petit-bourgeois developments and creates the free air of capital and even developments of mass participation in the factory belt to celebrate the formation of capital and more chances at wage which the petit-state is busy giving coupons of wage trade unions to stop from happening.

II. Exchange-Value and its Praise – Why Praise the Plunder as a Marxist?

In fact dynamics of exchange-value create the abstract potential of clearly finally capitalist cities, and drive away the pre-modern and fascistic caeserism of the petit-capitals and even middle capitals these state-like drivers of their on wealth and competitions for the high financial life which would be found nowhere in the world, because of the Brumiare of wealth which in fact is a petit-bourgeois form which mediates the laboring form and is its supervisor which then becomes the middle class and finally the fascistic Caeserism – two origins then the petit-bourgeois and their loving middle class – like a middle class housing experiment among these cheap trash.

III. Are Indian cities bourgeois at last?

Indian cities love capital's developments in the future, but are chained to middle class and petit-bourgeois developments all over – this is distinct from London which has only capital and capital to love which I call the distinction – first world cities and third world conditions.
